My favorite florescent lime-green food. These heads of tightly-beaded and pointed florets are crunchy and nutty, and significantly sweeter and milder than regular white cauliflower. Use as you would cauliflower or broccoli. My favorites are sautéed and tossed with miso or roasted and pureed with garlic, heavy cream and parmesan.

These round or slightly oblong berries have a taut, pale green skin and tomato-like flesh dotted with tiny edible seeds. Their tart juicy flesh is not as sweet as the red varieties, but offers flavors of kiwi, starfruit and green grape with a moderately acidic floral finish. Use in both sweet and savory preparations but as usual I love the savory, try quick pickling halved berries and serving over your favorite cut of Beeler's Pork.
